FATHERS OF FLIGHT—The Wright Brothers—(2)

All great ideas and inventions have a starting point. With the Wright brothers and their airplane it was in 1878, when Orville was 7 and his brother, Wilbur, 11. One day their father brought them home a strange-looking toy airplane. The toy was soon broken but its principle fired their young minds.

As the boys sat under their father's wing, they saw the toy airplane. They also built a primitive plane, constructed a model, and wireless telegraph. In 1903, they made a successful flight.

Arrangements were in charge of Funeral Director Henry M. O'Brien.
